

GENDER

EQUALITY

In the past years men have been in a far greater social standing in comparison to women. For example, in ancient Athens and other places there was patriarchy and suppression of women rights. Female women and children were forced to stay at home, do housework and chores, were striped of their education and taught only to speak and cook while males and their male offsprings got to go out instead, had multiple teachers that tought them to write and speak, play instruments, math and had them exercise their bodies. It was a totally unfair teaching system.

Of course suppression of women rights wasn't only a thing of the past, it is also present in the modern world. There has been a significant improvement in the treatment of women because women in recent years have stood their ground and defended themselves and their rights, bravely so. Still, there remains the matter in several professions and other fields. To give an example, there is a greater amount of male lawyers in comparison to female ones with our country, Greece having only 11% of our lawyers female.

11%

A 3D rendering of the number '11%' in a bold, red, sans-serif font. The numbers and the percentage symbol are thick and have a slight shadow underneath, giving them a three-dimensional appearance. A faint 'dreamstime' watermark is visible in the background.

11%

The number '11%' is centered within a black diamond shape. The diamond has a double-line border. The text is in a bold, black, sans-serif font.

Obviously though, it's not the only example we could give. To give further insight into the matter, in many , many secluded and poor ,still developing countries young women are taught from a young age that their goal should be to get married and have children. Furthermore, they are stripped of proper education and stay illiterate for the rest of their lives, not allowing them to speak up and express themselves and speak up for their rights. There are many, more cases of women suppression, so many in fact, that writing all of them would take days probably. This isn't a presentation, this is a message to women that they should stand their ground and fight for their rights.

50%
/ 50%

The image shows a chalkboard with the text "50%" written twice, separated by a diagonal slash. The top "50%" has a male symbol (♂) above the zero, and the bottom "50%" has a female symbol (♀) below the zero.

BY GREEK TEAM
SUPPORTERS OF GENDER EQUALITY