One day, a nightingale in a tree heard a beautiful girl and a handsome young man talking in a garden.
 "I like you very much, young man
 But I will only dance with you at the Prince's party tomorrow if you bring me a red rose."
 "A red rose?" said the young man.
 "All right! I will find one!"

The beautiful girl left the garden and the young man began to look for a rose.
He looked at all the rose trees
but he couldn't find a red rose.
He started to look sad.
The nightingale saw him and started to sing
"This handsome young man should not look so sad.
I will sing a song to make him happy again."

corner

The nightingale sang a beautiful song, while the young man looked
in every corner of the garden.
But he couldn't find a red rose!
"All I want is one red rose!
One red rose and my love will dance with me!
Where, where can I find a red rose?"

"Why is he crying?" said a green lizard.
 "Why is he sad?" said a red and yellow butterfly.
 "Why is he unhappy?" said a daisy to the grass.
 "He is crying for a red rose,"
 the nightingale told the garden.
 "For a red rose?" said the lizard.
 He started to laugh.

The nightingale didn't laugh.
It wanted to help the young man.
The nightingale liked to sing about love.
It flew to a rose tree and said,
"Give me a red rose and I will sing for you."
But the tree said,
"My roses are white."

The nightingale flew to another rose tree
"Give me a red rose and I will sing for you!"
"I'm sorry, little nightingale," said the rose tree
"My roses are yellow."

cold

The nightingale couldn't find a red rose.
It flew to the last rose tree in the garden.
"Give me a red rose and I will sing for you," it said.
"I'm sorry, nightingale.
My roses are red but winter was very cold,
and now I don't have any."
The nightingale was very sad.
"I only want one red rose. Help me, please!"

The rose tree said,
 "I know how to get a red rose,
 but it is a very sad way."
 "Tell me! Tell me," said the nightingale.
 "You must sing a beautiful song.
 You must press yourself onto one of my thorns.
 You must sing all night.
 Your blood will make one red rose grow."

"I must die for one red rose," said the nightingale
"But love is better than life
The young man can dance with the girl he loves"
The nightingale flew around the garden.
It was happy.

The young man saw the nightingale.
He heard its beautiful singing
He liked its music but he thought it wasn't useful.
"The nightingale sings a beautiful song
but only for itself.
It doesn't help anyone!
It only sounds beautiful."

moon

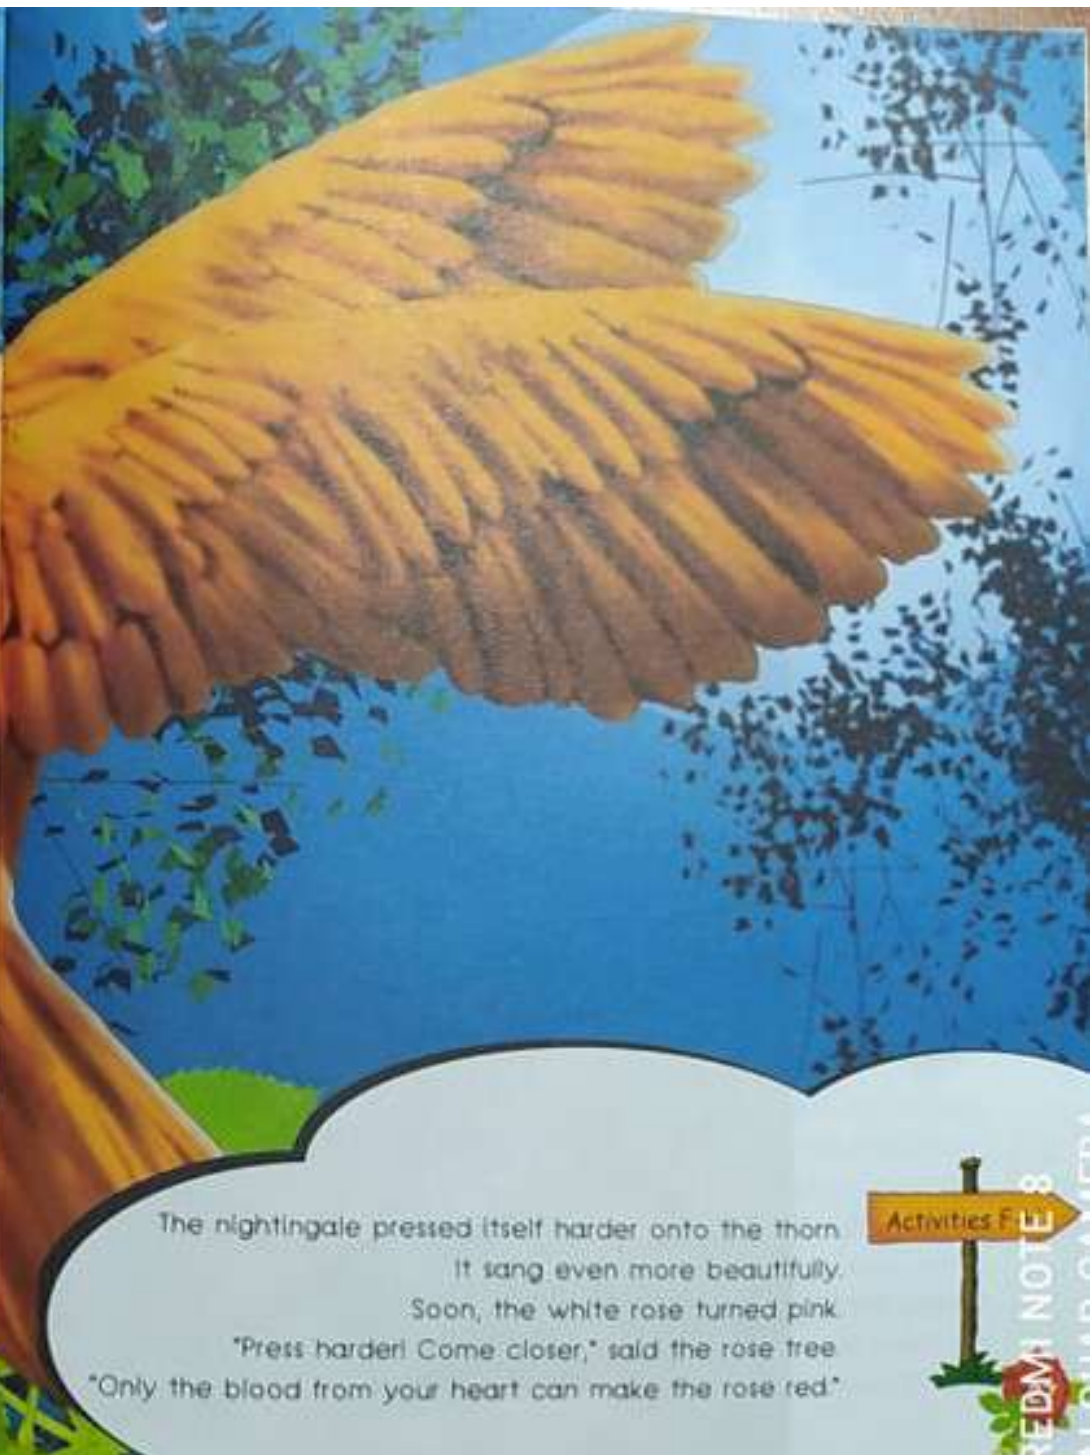

That night, when the moon was up,
the nightingale flew to the rose tree
It pressed itself against a thorn and began to sing
As the nightingale sang, a white rose grew
"Press harder! Come closer," said the rose tree
"The sun will come up before the rose is red."

The nightingale pressed itself harder onto the thorn
It sang even more beautifully
Soon, the white rose turned pink
"Press harder! Come closer," said the rose-tree
"Only the blood from your heart can make the rose red."

The nightingale sang its most beautiful song about love. It pressed itself against the thorn. The pink rose turned red. A beautiful red rose. The nightingale sang more quietly. Its eyes closed. And it fell to the ground. "The little nightingale is dead," cried the rose tree. "It is dead for one beautiful red rose."

pick

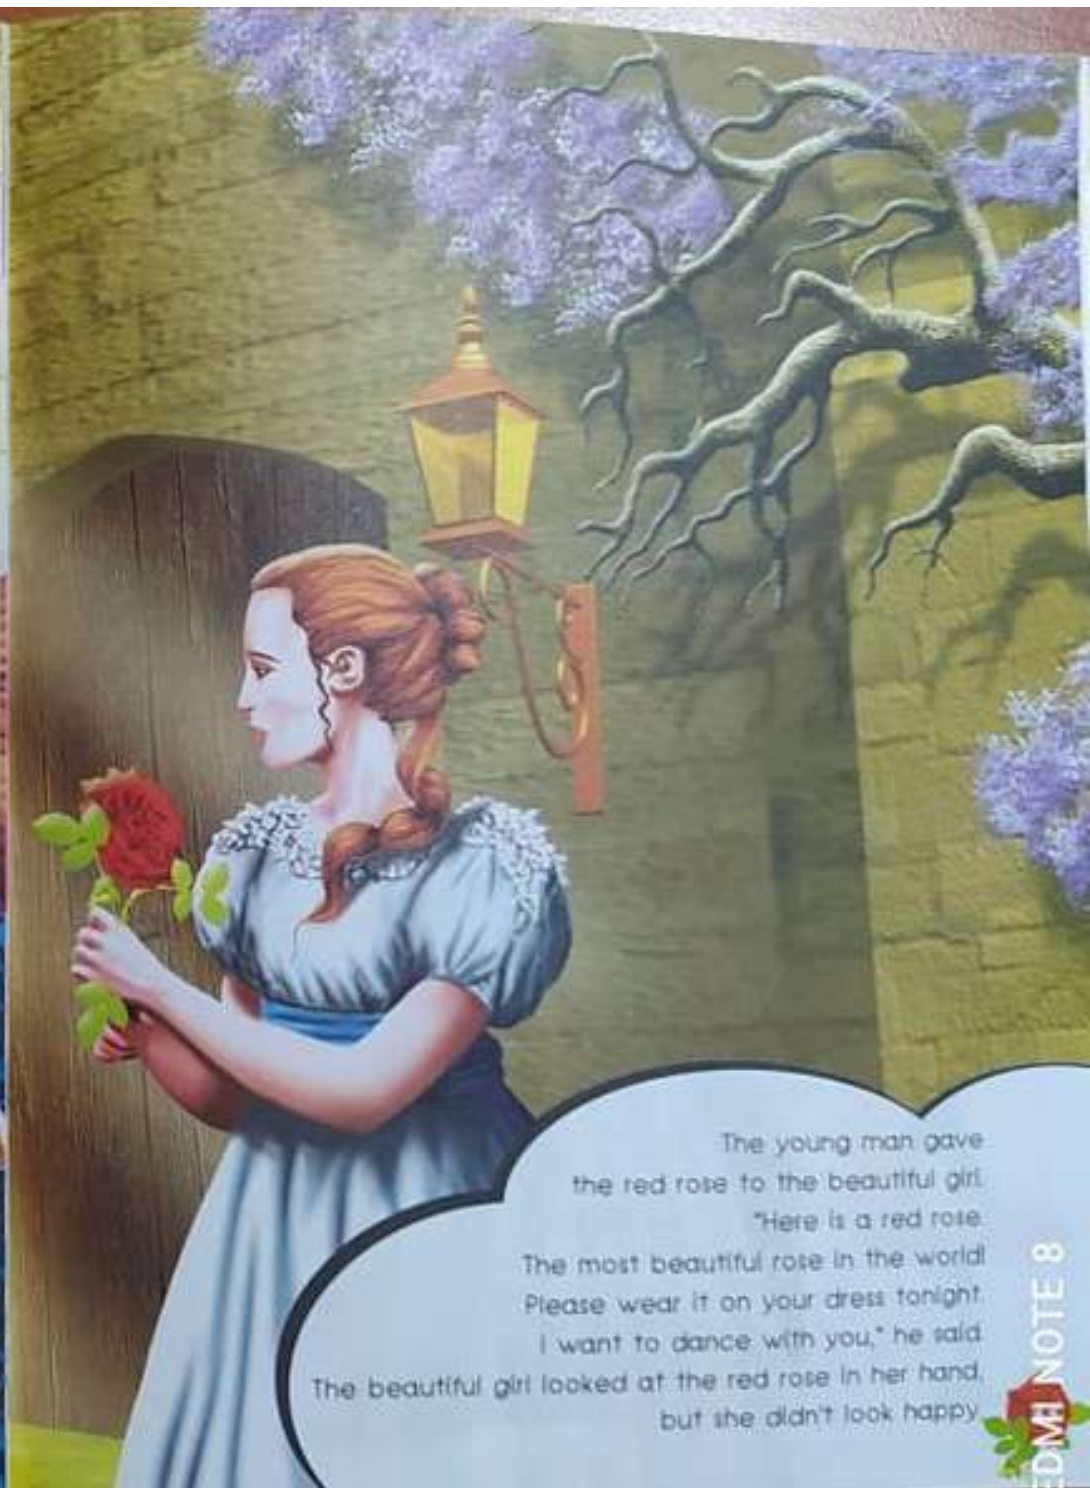

In the morning the young man
came into the garden
He saw the red rose
"Wonderful! A red rose!" he said
"Now my love will dance with me!"
He picked the red rose and ran out of the garden.

The young man gave the red rose to the beautiful girl.
"Here is a red rose, the most beautiful rose in the world. Please wear it on your dress tonight. I want to dance with you," he said.
The beautiful girl looked at the red rose in her hand, but she didn't look happy.

"I don't want a red rose anymore," she said.
 "Another young man brought me some jewels.
 I will dance with him at the Prince's party."
 Then, she threw the red rose away and left.
 "Why was I so stupid?" said the young man.
 "A rose is nothing! Love is nothing!"
 He stepped on the rose and walked away.
 And neither the beautiful girl
 nor the young man knew how the nightingale gave its life
 for one red rose.
